Roy Campanella

- Born: November 19, 1921, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
- Died: June 26, 1993, Woodland Hills, California
- Bats: right
- Throws: right
- Played for; Brooklyn Dodgers
- Elected to Hall of Fame by BBWAA: 1969
- 270 votes of 340 ballots cast: 79.41%
- Career Batting Record
- Hall of Fame Plaque

A star with both the bat and glove, Roy Campanella was agile behind the plate, had a rifle arm and was an expert handler of pitchers. He was named National League MVP three times, including a 1953 selection when he set single-season records for catchers with 41 homers and a National League best 142 RBI. Before signing with the Dodgers, the broad-shouldered receiver starred with the Negro National Leagues' Baltimore Elite Giants for seven seasons. His career was cut short by a tragic auto accident prior to the 1958 season.

Did you know ... Roy Campanella's final major league game, September 29, 1957, was also the last big league game ever played at Brooklyn's famed Ebbets Field?

Search Our Online Library Catalog "ABNER" for Roy Campanella Hall of Famer Biographies

© National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum, Inc.